

TALKING FOR MORNING

Republican Orators Address a Crowd on Wall Street.

Playful Brokers Let Loose Streamers of Ticker Tape.

John Sabine Smith Attacks Candidates Hill and His Party.

The Republicans rallied their friends and made one last grand effort to elect Alfred B. Mason, the good Government candidate for Assembly in the Eleventh District, who is a graduate of Yale University, and has acquired considerable prominence as a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency. Mr. Mason is making a lively campaign in the Eleventh District, which at the election was carried by James H. Smith, also a good Government candidate. The campaign of the Republicans is being carried on by the aid of the New York Times, which is publishing a series of articles in its columns.

Edmund Wetmore, President of the Republican Club, presided, and the speakers called into service were Congressman Lemuel E. Quigg, John H. Wise, John Sabine Smith, Charles L. Treat, and A. H. Steele.

The speakers' rostrum was constructed in the front of the wide platform immediately under the statue of Washington, and the top of the platform was covered with a large canopy. The first speaker, Mr. Quigg, delivered his first inaugural address at 11:30 o'clock by playing a melody of National airs and the Washington Post.

The wind was cold and strong, but this did not prevent a crowd gathering. At 12 o'clock the speakers resumed their work, and the wind blew the streamers of ticker tape across the street.

Secretary T. E. Laimbeer, of the Republican Club, said that the meeting was called to order by the playing of the National Anthem, and that the first speaker, Mr. Quigg, delivered his first inaugural address at 11:30 o'clock by playing a melody of National airs and the Washington Post.

While the band was playing its best and the hundreds of flags and banners waving from the balconies and the front of the building, the speakers in the Stock Exchange Building and Wall Street were talking for morning.

When the meeting was called to order, there were present on the platform ex-Governor John B. Alcock, John P. Brown, John H. Wise, John Sabine Smith, Charles L. Treat, and A. H. Steele.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

THE POLITICAL SWIM.

Candidates and Their Friends Who Are in the Great Game.

Alfred Bishop Mason, the good Government candidate for Assembly in the Eleventh District, who is a graduate of Yale University, and has acquired considerable prominence as a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency. Mr. Mason is making a lively campaign in the Eleventh District, which at the election was carried by James H. Smith, also a good Government candidate.

Edmund Wetmore, President of the Republican Club, presided, and the speakers called into service were Congressman Lemuel E. Quigg, John H. Wise, John Sabine Smith, Charles L. Treat, and A. H. Steele.

The speakers' rostrum was constructed in the front of the wide platform immediately under the statue of Washington, and the top of the platform was covered with a large canopy.

Secretary T. E. Laimbeer, of the Republican Club, said that the meeting was called to order by the playing of the National Anthem, and that the first speaker, Mr. Quigg, delivered his first inaugural address at 11:30 o'clock by playing a melody of National airs and the Washington Post.

While the band was playing its best and the hundreds of flags and banners waving from the balconies and the front of the building, the speakers in the Stock Exchange Building and Wall Street were talking for morning.

When the meeting was called to order, there were present on the platform ex-Governor John B. Alcock, John P. Brown, John H. Wise, John Sabine Smith, Charles L. Treat, and A. H. Steele.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

When John Sabine Smith was introduced, there was a howl for the millions of dollars. He said that he was a Republican, and that he was a graduate of Yale University, and that he was a writer upon economic questions, especially the subject of currency.

CANNOT BE AIDED

Attorney-General Says Illiterate Voters Must Go It Alone.

Help in Preparing Ballots Only Allowed the Physically Disabled.

Political Leaders in this City Excited Over the Opinion.

Attorney-General Hancock's opinion, published today, regarding the law governing the right of voters to have assistance in preparing their ballots on election day, has excited the campaign managers of both parties.

The Attorney-General says that there is no provision of the law which gives the illiterate voter the privilege of having some one prepare his ballots for him unless he has some physical disability which prevents him from picking out and filling his ballot properly.

A strict enforcement of the law as interpreted by Mr. Hancock would bar thousands of voters from exercising their right of suffrage and the matter was eagerly discussed today at every political headquarters in the city.

John Boyd Thacher said this forenoon, when the subject was brought to his notice, that the Attorney-General's opinion was of the greatest importance to the illiterate voter.

"If the law is lived up to strictly," he said, "a great many people will be unable to vote. However, I do not think that the Democratic vote in this city will be affected more than that of the Republicans."

It is a strange thing to say, but it is no less a fact, that the so-called illiterate vote is more accurate than what is styled the educated vote. The illiterate voter is the educated and cultivated voter who makes the most mistakes. He knows all sorts of things and comes into the booth and makes all sorts of ridiculous errors in the preparation of his ballot.

"You will probably remember that during the last election," he said, "I had to go to the polls and had to be helped to fill in my ballot properly."

The illiterate voter is carefully instructed. For instance, in the matter of the Constitutional Amendments, one ballot reads "for" and the other "against."

The illiterate voter is shown that there are more letters in the word "against" than in the word "for," and is led to fill in his ballot with a low order of intelligence that he can't remember that when he puts in the ballot, he is voting "for."

"I have no fear of the general result being affected by an enforcement of the law," he said, "but I do think that the illiterate vote will be more accurate than what is styled the educated vote."

According to the Election Law governing the assistance of voters, the causes of disability are enumerated as total blindness, deafness, insanity, and other physical disabilities which prevent the voter from picking out and filling his ballot properly.

Mr. Thacher, manager of the LXX's campaign, said he thought there would be no change in the result of the election because of the Attorney-General's opinion.

"I think the opinion is good law, and should be enforced," said D. G. Harrison, another campaign manager.

At Republican headquarters National Committee Chairman Charles Stecker, who has been in the city for some time, said that he was not at all concerned over the Attorney-General's opinion.

He said that the opinion was of the greatest importance to the illiterate voter, and that he was not at all concerned over the result of the election.

He said that the opinion was of the greatest importance to the illiterate voter, and that he was not at all concerned over the result of the election.

He said that the opinion was of the greatest importance to the illiterate voter, and that he was not at all concerned over the result of the election.

He said that the opinion was of the greatest importance to the illiterate voter, and that he was not at all concerned over the result of the election.

He said that the opinion was of the greatest importance to the illiterate voter, and that he was not at all concerned over the result of the election.

He said that the opinion was of the greatest importance to the illiterate voter, and that he was not at all concerned over the result of the election.

He said that the opinion was of the greatest importance to the illiterate voter, and that he was not at all concerned over the result of the election.

He said that the opinion was of the greatest importance to the illiterate voter, and that he was not at all concerned over the result of the election.

WOMAN'S MUNICIPAL LEAGUE.

Last Meeting Before Election Held Last Night.

The last meeting before election of the Woman's Municipal League was held in Madison Square Concert Hall, last night, and was very largely attended.

Others Who Seldom Voted Have Been Enrolled This Year.

The list of registered voters which has just been published by the Board of City Records emphasizes in a remarkable manner the interest which everybody seems to take in the struggle of Tuesday next. It also clearly indicates the political upheaval which honest citizens generally have been hopefully looking forward to for a long time.

Men who in years past took little or no interest in politics and who rarely registered have arisen to the occasion. There are a few, however, who apparently through their own carelessness, have lost their right to vote in the coming election.

Some of them have been loud in denunciation of Tammany. Still they have not registered. For instance, there is nothing whatever to show that Archbishop Corrigan registered from his home, 41 Madison Avenue, although the city directory says he lives there.

Rev. Father Thomas Dooley did not register from his home, 3 Lexington Street, where the city directory says he lives. The house named in the city directory is the home of the Rev. Father Dooley, who is now in the city directory.

Rev. Father Dooley has been in the city directory for many years. He has attended the hearings of the Lexow Committee, and he has been in the city directory for many years. He has attended the hearings of the Lexow Committee, and he has been in the city directory for many years.

One would naturally expect to find the name of ex-Mayor Abram S. Hewitt registered from his home, 3 Lexington Avenue, but it is not there. From that house, however, the city directory says that the name of Thomas C. Platt is registered.

Whitehall Reid did not think it worth his while to register, apparently, as he is not in the city directory. According to the city directory, he lives at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

DID NOT REGISTER.

Many Well-known Citizens Have Lost Their Right to Vote.

Some of Them Have Been Loud in Denunciation of Tammany.

Others Who Seldom Voted Have Been Enrolled This Year.

The list of registered voters which has just been published by the Board of City Records emphasizes in a remarkable manner the interest which everybody seems to take in the struggle of Tuesday next. It also clearly indicates the political upheaval which honest citizens generally have been hopefully looking forward to for a long time.

Men who in years past took little or no interest in politics and who rarely registered have arisen to the occasion. There are a few, however, who apparently through their own carelessness, have lost their right to vote in the coming election.

Some of them have been loud in denunciation of Tammany. Still they have not registered. For instance, there is nothing whatever to show that Archbishop Corrigan registered from his home, 41 Madison Avenue, although the city directory says he lives there.

Rev. Father Thomas Dooley did not register from his home, 3 Lexington Street, where the city directory says he lives. The house named in the city directory is the home of the Rev. Father Dooley, who is now in the city directory.

Rev. Father Dooley has been in the city directory for many years. He has attended the hearings of the Lexow Committee, and he has been in the city directory for many years. He has attended the hearings of the Lexow Committee, and he has been in the city directory for many years.

One would naturally expect to find the name of ex-Mayor Abram S. Hewitt registered from his home, 3 Lexington Avenue, but it is not there. From that house, however, the city directory says that the name of Thomas C. Platt is registered.

Whitehall Reid did not think it worth his while to register, apparently, as he is not in the city directory. According to the city directory, he lives at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

John B. Witt Warner, the present Congressman, who refused to take a stand for the city directory, is not in the city directory. He is the owner of the building at 100 East 10th Street, and he is the owner of the building.

FIVE REGISTRATION ARRESTS.

Four of the Prisoners Jailed and One Discharged.

The men are Patrick Kelly, who is accused of falsely registering in the Thirty-sixth Election District of the Third Assembly District; Frank Schroeder, charged with the same offense in the Forty-fifth Election District of the Eleventh Assembly District; Frank Murray, charged with the same offense in the First Election District of the Second Assembly District; and St. Clair Edwards, whose alleged offense is of a similar nature.

The men were taken to the Clerk of the Court's office, where they were committed to the Tombs in default of $1,500 bail each.

Another man who appeared in court today under the charge of illegally registering was Richard Jones, thirty-six years old, a porter in the St. Denis Hotel, who lives at 30 East Twenty-first Street. Jones registered in the Twenty-fifth Assembly District and gave the names of his neighbors as his neighbors on the registry lists and allow them to vote.

He was represented by Commissioner of Accounts Vanhise, who said that his client did not intend to register illegally. Justice McMahon believed the man's story, and he was discharged.

Judge Gillespie, of the Superior Court, today heard arguments upon the case of the woman who was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering.

The woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering.

The woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering.

The woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering.

The woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering.

The woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering.

The woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering.

The woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering.

The woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering.

The woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering.

The woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering.

The woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering.

The woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering.

The woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering.

The woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering.

The woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering.

The woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering.

The woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering.

The woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering.

The woman was charged with illegally registering. The case was heard by Judge Gillespie, and the woman was charged with illegally registering. The